6th Edition – Winter 2018

The Floodplain Remapping Project Enters Phase II

In response to the 2013 flood event, the State of Colorado is bolstering long-term planning and resiliency efforts by funding the Colorado Hazard Mapping Program (CHAMP) to update local flood hazard information including regulatory floodplain maps for the most affected waterways. Phase I draft map updates arrived in 2017 and the second, final phase of draft map review is currently underway. For a refresher on what floodplain areas are in Phase I vs. Phase II of the floodplain updates, visit www.bocofloodplainremapping.com to see a map and listing of the areas included in this study.

All Boulder County residents are eligible for flood insurance because even homes not located near the floodplain may suffer flood damage. You can learn more about flood insurance at www.floodsmart.gov.

In Boulder County, flash flooding is a very serious danger, especially during the summer months (April through October). Boulder County maps and regulates flood hazard areas to manage these risks as well as to inform property owners of flood hazards near their homes and businesses.
